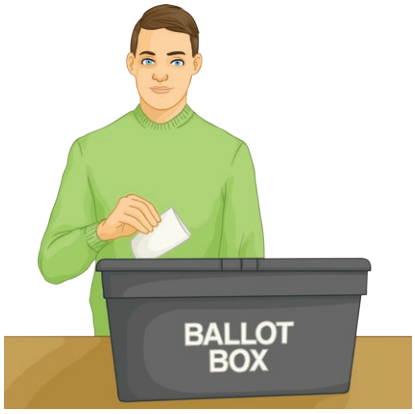
Causes of War

twinkl.com

Causes of War



twinkl.com

Causes of War

twinkl.com

Causes of War

twinkl.com

Causes of War

Economics

twinkl.com

Causes of War

Nationalism

twinkl.com

Causes of War

Religion

twinkl.com

Causes of War

Ideology

twinkl.com

Causes of War

This is related to money. Money, and the resources that generate it, can often cause conflict between countries. Countries may argue over important resources (such as oil) or be jealous of the wealth another country has. This can turn into armed conflict.

twinkl.com

Causes of War

An example of this is the Crusades, where European Christian countries attacked Muslim forces to remove them from the Holy Land.

twinkl.com

Causes of War

This can be a cause of war as different faiths have different views. These often conflict with each other. This can cause tension which can then turn into violence.

twinkl.com

Causes of War

An example of this is the Vietnam War. In this conflict, some Vietnamese people were communists who wanted the country be governed in accordance with their beliefs. They fought Vietnamese people who believed in capitalism. America sent forces to support the anti-communist forces as they had similar political beliefs.

twinkl.com

Causes of War

This is another word for political beliefs. People often have radically different views about how countries should be run. Sometimes these cannot be resolved peacefully through voting. This can lead to them spilling over and turning into war.

twinkl.com

Causes of War

In this context, this word means someone feels their country or ethnic group is superior to others. This can lead to war as they feel they need to prove this superiority and be dominant over others.

twinkl.com

Causes of War

Some people believe the recent Iraq War was largely fought for money. This is because Iraq had a lot of valuable oil, which they believe America and Britain wanted to get access to. However, this is a very controversial theory that many people do not agree with.

twinkl.com

Causes of War

Hitler believed that Germany and the Aryan (white German) race was superior to all other countries and peoples. Because of this he invaded several other countries in the Second World War and carried out the holocaust against the Jewish and other groups he saw as inferior.

twinkl.com

Causes of War Card Sort Answers

	Religion	This can be a cause of war as different faiths have different views. These often conflict with each other. This can cause tension which can then turn into violence.	An example of this is the Crusades where Christian countries attacked Muslim forces to remove them from the Holy Land.
	Ideology	This is another word for political beliefs. People often have radically different views about how countries should be run. Sometimes these cannot be resolved peacefully through voting. This can lead to them spilling over and turning into war.	An example of this is the Vietnam War. In this conflict, some Vietnamese people were communists who wanted the country be governed in accordance with their beliefs. They fought Vietnamese people who believed in capitalism. America sent forces to support the anti-communist forces as they had similar political beliefs.
	Economics	This is related to money. Money, and the resources that generate it, can often cause conflict between countries. Countries may argue over important resources (such as oil) or be jealous of the wealth another country has. This can turn into armed conflict.	Some people believe the recent Iraq War was largely fought for money. This is because Iraq had a lot of valuable oil, which they believe America and Britain wanted to get access to. However, this is a very controversial theory that many people do not agree with.
	Nationalism	In this context, this word means someone feels their country or ethnic group is superior to others. This can lead to war as they feel they need to prove this superiority and be dominant over others.	Hitler believed that Germany and the Aryan (white German) race was superior to all other countries and peoples. Because of this he invaded several other countries and carried out the holocaust against the Jews and other groups he saw as inferior.